Frankfort M. E. Church Raises Money For Starving Russians

As a rule we hear a great deal about doing good deeds on Christmas and of the old adage that it is more blessed to give than to receive, yet no matter how fine sounding these admonitions may be if the right kind of deeds do not back them up they count for nothing. In these days sin and crime is greatly magnified and played up whereas the good things are seldom heard of.

The Frankfort M. E. church and its pastor, Rev. Theodore Miner, believe in practical applied Christianity and not in a theoretical one. To back up their faith in practical deeds this church took up a collection of $12 at the Christmas morning service for the starving Russian children in the Voga river valley where famine has mowed down thousands of the little lives. It is to be hoped that more of the practical Christianity will be carried out in the churches everywhere, for it is only by so doing that the church will really and truly fulfill its mission.

BOY SCOUT TROOP BEING ORGANIZED

For the first time in the history of Frankfort a movement is in progress for the organization of a local troop of Boy Scouts. The organization work is under the direction of (Nig) Bennett. This is a most noteworthy undertaking and it is hoped will prove very successful.

CHRISTMAS EXERCISES WELL ATTENDED

The Christmas exercises held at the Frankfort churches Saturday night were very largely attended. At the St. Peter's Evangelical church a very fine program was rendered. The Sunday school and young people took part in the exercises. A beautiful Christmas tree well trimmed and lighted added to the pleasure of the little folks and even the older ones. Presents were distributed to the Sunday school scholars.

On Christmas day special Christmas services were held by Rev. G. Lambrecht.

At the M. E. church an unusual program was rendered. The outstanding feature of the evening's entertainment was a cantata "The Hope of the World," which was rendered by the newly organized Frankfort M. E. Church Choral Society, under the able direction of Mrs. Milton Hollstein. This was a very delightfully rendered number and was very much appreciated by a large audience. The Sunday school also took part in the exercises and the little folks carried out their parts in a pleasing and entertaining manner. Special music added to the pleasure of the program. A pretty decorated Christmas tree delighted old and young.

NEW YEAR PARTIES

At the St. Peter's Evangelical church the annual New Year's Eve services will be held by Rev. G. Lambrecht, followed with a special New Year services on Sunday.

The M. E. church will be the scene of a watch-night party on Saturday evening when the congregation and their friends will watch the old year out and the new year in. Special services will be held in the evening by Rev. Theodore Miner, later on a social time will be enjoyed followed by the serving of refreshments by the Ladies' Aid. The services will begin at 8 p. m.

FEATHER BEDS COST FORTUNE IN GERMANY

How would you like to live in Germany and pay 3,000 marks for a feather bed, 2,000 marks for a suit of clothes, 100 marks for a hundred lbs. of potatoes, 45 marks for a lb. of butter and 7 marks for a lb. of flour?

This is the current prevailing price list for these commodities according to a letter received by Geo. Schreiber from his nephew residing in Germany. The letter states, there is plenty of work and the factories and other industries are running full blast but the high cost of living takes all the high wages earned by the laboring class so they are nothing ahead. It costs a small fortune to get married there. The old reliable German feather bed is always considered a part of the furnishings of a household and a newly wedded couple must be able to put up 3,000 marks alone for this luxury.

While Geo. Stoeckman was going to the Xmas services at the Zion Luth. church Saturday night he fell on an icy walk and injured his right arm quite badly. He had an X-ray taken of the injured member at St. Francis hospital, Blue Island this week to determine whether it is a break or a fracture.

CHAPTER XXII.

Wherein Abe Lincoln Reveals His Method of Conducting a Lawsuit in the Case of Henry Brimstead et al., vs. Lionel Davis.

They found many of Davis' notes in Tazewell county. Abe Lincoln's complaint represented seven clients and a sum exceeding twenty thousand dollars.

With the papers in his pocket Harry went on to the Honey Creek settlement. There he found that the plague had spent itself and that Bim had gone to a detention camp outside the city of Chicago. He was not permitted to see her, the regulations having become very strict. In the city he went to the store of Eli Fredenberg. The merchant received him with enthusiasm. Chicago had begun to recover from the panic. Trade was lively.

Harry spent the afternoon with Mrs. Kelso and Bim's baby boy. He wrote a very tender letter to Bim that day. He told her that he had come to Chicago to live so that he might be near her and ready to help her if she needed help. "The same old love is in my heart that made me want you for my wife long ago, that has filled my letters and sustained me in many an hour of peril," he wrote. "If you really think that you must marry Davis, I ask you at least to wait for the developments of a suit which Abe Lincoln is bringing in behalf of many citizens of Tazewell county. It is likely that we shall know more than we do now before that case ends. I saw your beautiful little boy. He looks so much like you that I long to steal him and keep him with me."

In a few days he received this brief reply:

"Dear Harry: Your letter pleased and pained me. I have been so tossed about that I don't know quite where I stand. For a long time my life has been nothing but a series of emotions. What Honest Abe may be able to prove I know not, but I am sure that he cannot disprove the fact that Mr. Davis has been kind and generous to me. For that I cannot ever cease to be grateful. I should have married him before now but for one singular circumstance. My little boy cannot be made to like him. He will have nothing to do with Mr. Davis. He will not be bribed or coerced. I saw in this a prophecy of trouble. I left home and went down into the very shadow of death. It may be that we have been saved for each other by the wisdom of childhood. I must not see you now. Nor shall I see him until I have found my way. Even your call cannot make me forget that I am under a solemn promise."

"I'm glad you like the boy. He is a wonderful child. I named him Nehemiah for his grandfather. We call him Nim and sometimes 'Mr. Nimble' because he is so lively. I'm homesick to see him and you. I am going to Dixon to teach and earn money for mother and the baby. Don't tell anyone where I am and above all don't come to see me until in good heart I can ask you to come."

"God bless you!"

"BIM."

In a few weeks the suit came on. Davis' defense, as given in the answer, alleged that the notes were to be paid out of the proceeds of the sale of lots and that in consequence of the collapse of the boom there had been no such proceeds. As to the understanding upon which the notes were drawn, there was a direct issue of veracity for which Abe Lincoln was exceedingly well prepared. His cross-examination was as merciless as sunlight "falling round a helpless thing." It was kindly and polite in tone but relentless in its searching. When it ended, the weight of Davis' character had been accurately established. In his masterly summing up Mr. Lincoln presented every circumstance in favor of the defendant's position. With remarkable insight he anticipated the arguments of his attorney. He presented them fairly and generously to the court and jury. According to Samson the opposing lawyers admitted in a private talk that Lincoln had thought of presumptions in favor of Davis which had not occurred to them. Therein lay the characteristic of Mr. Lincoln's method in a lawsuit.

"It was a safe thing for him to do, for he never took a case in which justice was not clearly on his side," Samson writes. "If he had been deceived as to the merits of a case he would drop it. With the sword of justice in his hand he was invincible."

A judgment was rendered in favor of the plaintiffs for the full amount of their claim with costs. The character of Lionel Davis had been sufficiently revealed. Even the credulous Mrs. Kelso turned against him. Mr. Lincoln's skill as a lawyer was recognized in the north as well as in the middle counties. From that day forth no man enjoyed a like popularity in Tazewell county.

When Samson and Harry Needles left the courthouse, there seemed to be no obstacle between the young man and the consummation of his wishes. Unfortunately, as they were going down the steps Davis, who blamed Samson for his troubles, flung an insult at the sturdy Vermont. Samson, who had then arrived at years of firm discretion, was little disturbed by the anger of a man so discredited. But Harry, on the sound of the hateful words, had leaped forward and dealt the speculator a savage blow in the face which for a few seconds had deprived him of the power of speech. That evening a friend of Davis called at the City hall with a challenge. The hot-blooded young soldier accepted it against the urgent counsel of Samson. That night, Mr. Lincoln, having left the city.

As to the details of the tragic scene that followed next day, the writer has little knowledge. Samson was not the type of man for such a chronicle. The diary speaks of his part in it with shame and sorrow and remorse. We know that it was at daybreak when he and Harry rode to a point on the prairie "something more than a mile from the city limits." There he tells us they met Davis and one friend of the latter and two surgeons. It is evident, too, that great secrecy had been observed in the plan and its execution and that, until some time after the last act, Lincoln knew nothing of the later developments in the drama of Davis' downfall. For the rest of the deplorable scene the historian must content himself with the naked details in the diary of a puritan pioneer.

"I went because there was no escape from it and with the shadow of God's wrath in my soul," Samson writes. "The sun rose as we halted our horses. We paced the field. The two men took their places twenty yards apart. The pistols rang out at the command to fire and both men fell. Davis had been hit at the left shoulder. My handsome boy lay on his face. The bullet had bored through his right lung. Before I could reach him he had risen to his feet to go on with the battle. Davis lay like one paralyzed by the shock of the bullet. His seconds declared they were satisfied. I saw them take the bullet out of

The Two Men Took Their Places.

Harry's back, where it had lodged under his skin. I helped them put the wounded men into the wagon and rode to the home of one of the doctors near the city wherein were rooms for the accommodation of critical cases, leading Harry's horse and praying for God's help and forgiveness. I took care of the boy until Steve Nuckles came to help me. Bim arrived when Harry was out of his head and didn't know her. She was determined to stay and do the nursing, but I wouldn't let her. She did not look strong. I loaned her the money to pay the debt to Davis and persuaded her to go back to her work in Dixon. She went and was rather heartbroken about it.

"The surgeon said that Harry would live if lung fever didn't set in. It set in, but he pulled through. He mended slowly. I had some fear of arrest, but the conspiracy of silence kept the facts under cover. It was partly due, I guess, to the friendship of John Wentworth for me and Honest Abe. He kept it out of the papers. There were no complaints and the rumors soon fell into silence.

"The boy, 'Mr. Nimble,' is a cunning little man. When he began to get better, Harry loved to play with him and listen to his talks about fairies. The young man was able to leave his bed, by and by, but he didn't get over his weakness and pallor. He had no appetite. I sent him with Nuckles into the Wisconsin woods to live in the open. Then I took the small boy to Dixon with me in the saddle. Bim had just got back to her work. She told me that Eliphalet Biggs had been there. He had heard of the boy and wished to see him and demanded to know where he was. For fear that Biggs would try to get possession of 'Mr. Nimble' I took him with me to Springfield in the saddle.

"I learn that Davis has recovered his health and left the city. A man can not do business without friends and after the trial Chicago was no place for him."

CHAPTER XXIII.

Which Presents the Pleasant Comedy of Individualism in the New Capital, and the Courtship of Lincoln and Mary Todd.

Samson, with "Mr. Nimble" on a pad stuffed with straw in front of him, jogged across the prairies and waded the creeks and sloughs on his way to Springfield. The little lad was in his fourth year that summer. He slept and talked much on the way and kept Samson busy with queries about the sky and the creeks and the great flowery meadows.

They camped the first night in a belt of timber and Samson writes that the boy "slept snug against me with his head on my arm. He went to sleep crying for his mother." He adds:

"It reminded me of the old days of my young fatherhood. 'Mr. Nimble' wanted to pick all the flowers and splash his bare feet in every stream. In the evening he would talk to the stars as if he were playing with them. He is like some of the grown folks in Chicago. He would sit hanging on to the reins, and talk to the horse and to God by the hour. He used to tell me that God was a friend of his and I think he was right. It was good luck to get back to Sarah and the children. They took the little stranger into their hearts. 'Heart room, house room' is the motto of this part of the country."

It was a new town to which Samson returned. The governor and the state officers had moved to Springfield. The new capitol was nearing completion. The hard times which had followed the downfall of '37 had unjustly diminished Mr. Lincoln's confidence in his ability as a legislator. He enjoyed the practice of the law, which had begun to turn his interest from the affairs of state. But the pot of political science boiled before the fireplace in the rear of Joshua Speed's store every evening that Lincoln and his associates were in Springfield. The wit and wisdom which bubbled into its vapors and the heat that surrounded it were the talk of the town. Many came to witness the process and presently it was moved, for a time, to more accommodating quarters. Before a crowd of people in the Presbyterian church, Lincoln, Logan, Baker and Browning for the Whigs, Douglas, Calhoun, Lamborn and Thomas for the Democrats, having assiduously prepared for the trial, debated the burning issues of the time. The effort of each filled an evening and Lincoln's speech gave him new hope of himself. Wise men began to have great confidence in his future. He had taken the style of Webster for his model. He no longer used the broad humor which had characterized his efforts on the stump. A study of the best speeches of the great New Englander had made him question its value in a public address. Dignity, clear reasoning and impressiveness were the chief aims of his new method, the latter of which is aptly illustrated by this passage from his speech in reply to Douglas in the debate mentioned:

"If I ever feel the soul within me elevate and expand to those dimensions not wholly unworthy of its Almighty Architect, it is when I contemplate the cause of my country deserted by all the world besides, and I standing up boldly and alone and hurling defiance at her victorious oppressors. Here without contemplating consequences before high heaven and in the face of the world I swear eternal fidelity to the just cause, as I deem it, of the land of my life, my liberty and my love."

In these perceptive utterances one may find little to admire save a great spirit seeking to express itself and lacking as yet the refinement of taste equal to his undertaking. He was no heaven-born genius "sprung in full panoply from the head of Jove." He was just one of the slow, common folk, with a passion for justice and human rights, slowly feeling his way upward. His spirit was growing. Strong in its love and knowledge, of common men and of the things necessary to their welfare, it was beginning to seek and know "the divine power of words." Every moment of leisure he gave to the study of Webster and Burke and Byron and Shakespeare and Burns. He had begun to study the art of Irving and Walter Scott and of a new writer of the name of Dickens.

There were four men who slept with him in the room above Speed's store, and one of them has told how he used to lie sprawled on the floor, with his pillow and candle, reading long after the others had gone to sleep. Samson writes that he never knew a man who understood the art of using minutes as he did. A detached minute was to him a thing to be filled with value. Yet there were few men so deeply in love with fun. He loved to laugh at a story-telling and to match his humor with Thompson Campbell—a famous raconteur—and to play with children. Fun was as necessary to him as sleep. He searched for it in people and in books.

He came often to Samson's house to play with "Mr. Nimble" and to talk with Joe. Some of his best thoughts came when he was talking with Joe and some of his merriest moments when he was playing with "Mr. Nimble." He confessed that it was the latter that reminded him that he had better be looking for a wife.

But Lincoln was only one of many remarkable personalities in Springfield who had discovered themselves and were seeking to be discovered. Sundry individuals were lifting their heads above the crowd, but not with the modesty and self-distrust of Honest Abe. "Steve" Douglas, whom Samson had referred to as "that little rooster of a man," put on the stilts of a brave and ponderous vigor. His five-foot stature and his hundred pounds of weight did not fit the part of Achilles. But he would have no other. He blustered much with a spear too heavy for his hands. Lincoln used to call him a kind of popgun.

This free-for-all joust of individualism—one of the first fruits of freedom in the West—gave to the life of the little village a rich flavor of comedy. The great talents of Douglas had not been developed. His character was as yet shifty and shapeless. Some of the leading citizens openly distrusted him. Lincoln never liked this little man, in opposing whom he was to come to the fulness of his power on the platform. It is evident that Lincoln regarded him as an able advocate of small sincerity looking chiefly for personal advancement.

There is a passage in the diary which illustrates the character of Douglas and Lincoln's knowledge of it. The passage relates to a day in the famous debates of 1858. Lincoln had not reached Havana in time to hear the speech of his opponent. A great crowd had come by train and in wagons. Taking advantage of his absence, Douglas had called Lincoln "a liar, a coward and a sneak," and declared that he was going to fight him.

Lincoln heard of this and said in his speech:

"I shall not fight with Judge Douglas. A fight could prove nothing at issue in this campaign. It might prove that he is a more muscular man than I, or that I am a more muscular man than he, but this subject is not mentioned in either platform. Again, he and I are really very good friends and when we are together he would no more think of fighting me than of fighting his wife. Therefore, when the judge talked about fighting, he was not giving vent to any ill feeling, but was trying to excite—well, let us say, enthusiasm against me on the part of his audience."

Justice accomplished her ends now and then with comic displays of violence in the prairie capital. One night Abe Lincoln and certain of his friends captured a shoemaker who had beaten his wife and held him at the village pump while the aggrieved woman gave him a sound thrashing. So this phase of imperialism was cured in Springfield by "hair off the same dog," as Lincoln put it.

One evening, while E. D. Baker was speaking in the crowded village courtroom above Lincoln's office and was rudely interrupted and in danger of assault, the long legs of Honest Abe suddenly appeared through a scuttle hole in the ceiling above the platform. He leaped upon it and seizing a stone water pitcher defied any one to interfere with the right of free speech in a worthy cause.

So it will be seen that there were zestful moments in these sundry vindications of the principles of Democracy in the prairie capital.

CULTIVATE HABIT OF THRIFT

Practice Means That One Will Be Ready to Seize Opportunity When It Comes.

Practice thrift habitually. Make it as much a part of your routine as eating and sleeping. Get yourself systematized. Work on a definite schedule. Save regular amounts. Plan your work and your actions so that you will have no idle time, no lost motion, no wasted energy.

These are among the secrets of success, happiness and progress.

The time to begin the cultivation of thrift habits is now.

The most important message that can be conveyed to the people of this nation today is: "Get the thrift habit."

Practice thrift not for a brief interval or intermittently, but habitually.

Disraeli said, "The greatest secret of success in life is to be ready when your opportunity comes."

This brief sentence furnishes one of the best reasons for practicing thrift that ever has been given. It presents a phase of the question to which not enough attention is paid. Ordinarily thrift is looked upon as a means of safeguarding one against possible emergencies or of building up an accumulation of money for some definite purpose. But there are many unexpected turns in the pathway of life.—Thrift Magazine

Pretty Things That are made at Home

Enduring House Garments

HOME, sweet home, is made much sweeter and more livable by those endearing little house garments that women delight to wear within their own four walls. Any male person will acknowledge the charm of colorful coats and dainty jackets or crisp and cheerful house dresses, in the company of frivolous breakfast caps, worn when his women-folk start the day right. And at its close, the tired business man is much refreshed by the sight, at his table, of unusual and interesting house gowns. The pleasant thing about it is that anyone may have pretty breakfast jackets or select house dresses and aprons that are attractive as well as practical. There is nothing more worth while than careful choosing of these everyday things.

Just now it is the very simple breakfast coat of colored taffeta, in plain or changeable weaves, that appears to be uppermost in the minds of women who are making a choice. These coats are straight garments, a little shorter than the petticoats worn under them, and having three-quarter length sleeves. They are provided with small patch pockets and finished at the edges with ruchings of the silk. The pockets are an invitation to gay flowers or fruits of silk to find a resting place on them.

Silks, laces, and all their pretty kindred in fabrics, naturally travel

Their old friend and ally in the cause of beauty has taken on new charm, vindicating the judgment of designers who use it. The last hats of winter and the first hats that hint of spring are here and a lot of them are cheerfully be-ribboned; whoever needs new millinery may choose these final figures in the year's millinery pageant.

Ribbons on hats for present wear are applied to shapes of velvet or felt, for southern tourists, or the demi-season, to satin, crepe or silk hats, as the four handsome models pictured here reveal. At the head of the group is a small French sailor of velvet, with a soft crown—it might be made of any other millinery fabric. Narrow, metal-edged ribbon is applied to it, row on row, in scant ruffles, and it has a sprightly finish in pointed ends of velvet that spring from a knot at the side. In a hat of georgette, with drooping brim, definite crown lines are emphasized by covering the side crown with many little loops of narrow pleated ribbon, the same ribbon finishing its mission with a double sash about the crown and many ends reaching toward the brim edge.

A hat that would be attractive in any fabric is pictured in felt and the road that leads to breakfast jackets, and ribbons are nearly always found in their company. Printed cottons, in the finer weaves, make some of the most pleasing jackets, lace and ribbon trimmed. These are usually more simple in design than the lace jacket shown in the illustration, which, being longer lived, merits more time in making. For this, val lace edging and insertion are set together in panels, and these joined to form the handsome little affair that will delight its owner. Satin ribbon, arranged in loops, lends it color.

For the ambitious needlewoman a dainty piece of neckwear is shown. It may be found in the shops, ready made, but it soars in price when made by hand, and becomes an accessory to be proud of, having that quality of elegance which belongs to hand-work.

This season the most time-honored of trimmings for hats finds the stanchest support; for smart women have approved with emphasis the ribbon-trimmed hat. They are apparently enjoying the many ingenious ways, sometimes intricate and unexpected, in which ribbons have been worked up into forms new and strange and beautiful. Their old friend and ally in the cause of beauty has taken on new charm, vindicating the judgment of designers who use it. The last hats of winter and the first hats that hint of spring are here and a lot of them are cheerfully be-ribboned; whoever needs new millinery may choose these final figures in the year's millinery pageant.

Tub Suits for Children.

Tub suits of cotton or linen are all the year favorites, and very practical these wash garments are for children living in well-heated houses or apartments. However, the wool jersey suits usually stand a lot of wear before cleaning is necessary, and if carefully handled this fabric washes satisfactorily.

"Lord, Thou hast been our refuge from one generation to another"

God, our help in ages past,
Our hope for years to come,
Our shelter from the stormy blast,
And our eternal home. Amen.

Under the shadow of Thy throne,
Thy saints have dwelt secure;
Sufficient is Thine arm alone,
And our defence is sure.

Before the hills in order stood,
Or earth received her frame,
From everlasting Thou art God,
To endless years the same.

A thousand ages in Thy sight
Are like an evening gone;
Short as the watch that ends the night
Before the rising sun.

Time, like an ever-rolling stream,
Bears all its sons away;
They fly forgotten, as a dream
Dies at the opening day.

God, our help in ages past,
Our hope for years to come,
Be Thou our guard while life shall last,
And our eternal home. Amen.

LIFE'S NEW YEAR

Our Being Not Transitory, but an Eternal Possession.

Time Has Very Little to Do With the Fundamental Things of Our Existence.

THE serious thing is, not that life is or may be short, but that it may be wasted or misused—indeed is likely to be so in most cases. There are few men in whom there is not something of the slacker—and yet there is so much to do! Others are not slackers, but only because they have no sense of responsibility, and are conscious of no obligation. To these the sudden realization that time is passing swiftly by comes with a terrifying effect—when it comes at all. It was these that the Psalmist had in mind when he wrote:

"Yet they think that their houses shall continue forever; and that their dwelling places shall endure from generation to generation; and they call their lands after their own names."

So it is harder to live nobly and bravely than it is to die gallantly in defense of a righteous cause at the call of country. This is, of course, in no way surprising. Yet the obligation is the same in both cases, for in both it is a question of being loyal to duty, sensitive to the promptings of what is best in human nature. If time is short the wise thing is, not, as the Roman poet suggested, to use it recklessly and to the utmost in mere enjoyment, but to build it into the future self which is being realized with the passage of each day. Life thus used is not transitory, but rather an eternal possession, something of which a man cannot be deprived. And that, of course, is the moral of New Year's day. It is an old moral, and yet ever new—new every morning. Indeed, practically the whole of religion, as applied to daily life, is summed up in it. For religion, even more than culture, is "the study of perfection," and it speaks of, and was meant to further, the progress from imperfection to perfection.

He who has been "made perfect in a short time" has, as has been seen, "fulfilled a long time." "And an unspotted life is old age." On the other hand, the man who dies in wickedness dies in his youth even though he live far beyond the scriptural term. Time, therefore, has very little to do with the fundamental things of life.

THE GLAD NEW YEAR.

Now joy bells ring across the lea,
All clear and sweet and full and free,
A message that the world may hear.
It is New Year! The glad New Year!

Thou snows lie deep on hill and plain,
Our voices sing the full refrain
Of hope and faith and wondrous cheer.
It is New Year! The glad New Year!

We break the links of trouble's chain,
Forget the sorrow and the pain
And with our loved ones gather near.
It is New Year! The glad New Year!

The past is the past, its grief is gone,
There breaks for us a brighter dawn.
God sends to us a gift most dear—
It is New Year! A glad New Year!

—Ruth Raymond.

The Flag of Hope

NEW YEAR day flies the flag of hope. Many of us come to the close of the year with a sense of defeat. We have failed to accomplish what we had hoped. Events have shaped themselves against us, and we have lacked the power to stem the tide. The good resolutions with which we so bravely started soon went lame and dropped out. Thus many of us find the shadows of disappointment, discouragement and failure falling around us as the old year closes. What is the use of struggling longer? We are fated to disaster.

Then New Year day dawns and something is saying: "Try again." There is ozone in the air. Events begin to wear a different outline. Voices are calling. Hands beckon us on. And as we lift our eyes to face the future, yonder on the sky line flies the flag of hope.

This is what New Year day would do for you and me. It would put ginger and punch into our sapped and fading vitality. It would help us to stand on our feet and look the world fearlessly in the face and carry on. It would shout in our ears: "Forward! March!"

Some cynic may say it will be the old story again, but success is on the road to meet the man who tries. It is a glorious thing to put up a fight, even if you seem to lose. We are not lost because we fail, but because we decline to attempt.

The page of yesterday is a stained page, blurred by our tears and blotched with failure, but the page of tomorrow is white and clean. The New Year is saying that you may do better. Grandly begin!—Dr. James I. Vance, in Springfield (Ill.) Journal.

DATE CREAMS.

2 cupfuls brown sugar, ¼ cupful corn sirup, ½ cupful water, ¼ teaspoonful cream of tartar, ½ cupful dates, ½ cupful walnut meats, 2 egg whites, 1 teaspoonful vanilla.

Boil together the sugar, corn sirup, water, and cream of tartar until it will form a soft ball in cold water; add the dates which have been chopped fine, return the pan to the fire and boil until it forms a hard ball in cold water; add the vanilla, then pour the mixture over the stiffly beaten egg whites. Beat until creamy, then drop by spoonfuls onto oiled paper; put half walnut meats on top.

THE FIRST OF THE YEAR
"Hey, what are you doing there?"
"Turning over a new leaf! The first of the year is most here."

NEW YEAR'S GIFTS

Exchange of Hearts Regarded as Most Acceptable.

The Most Valued Gems Are Those Strung on Love's Chain and Beyond Price.

Ah, they know not heart
Of man or woman who declare
That love needs time to woo with care!
His altars wait not day nor name—
Only the touch of sacred flame.

IT MAY be dangerous for a young man to ask a nice young woman who has been paying marked attention to her what he would like to have her give him for a New Year's gift, Laura Jean Libbey writes. Nine out of ten men will make ready answer: "I should appreciate, more than words can tell, a gift that money can't buy—your heart, dear, and the promise of your hand in wedlock."

Why shouldn't a lover make bold to ask for the treasure that is nearest his heart, when the opportunity is his? What maiden, who really loves, will say aught else than "you may ask papa?" Why shouldn't an exchange of hearts be the most acceptable holiday gift that can be given?

All else can be bought with gold by any hand that holds it. The tender, love of a pure sweetheart, the earnest, absorbing devotion of a good, loving wife, the love of little children, age and of parents, brothers, sisters and of kinsfolk, are gems strung upon love's chain—beyond price.

The childless husband and wife would give all their wealth if it could purchase a love-bond—a child whom they could press to their breast—their very own. The proud old bachelor, whom all the world envies, would barter his wealth for the real love of one honest, trusting heart.

But the women from among whom he would choose a mate do not want him. He finds that all the wealth of the Indies cannot purchase that which is God-given—love.

Money cannot buy such loyalty as exists between son and sire; between mother and daughter. A rich man might secure the hand of a woman young and beautiful in marriage, but if her heart has not gone with it, he soon finds wealth, with all its glitter, which can buy many comforts, cannot purchase love. Nor can it buy happiness and contentment or prolong life one moment longer than destiny decrees.

If health was a favor which only the rich could buy, The rich would live. The poor would die. The miser who was caught in his own trap by the spring door swinging to and locking itself behind him, found that all his gold was but dross to him and set him free. The millionaire, going down in a sinking ship, finds that the life of a struggling sailor is fully as precious as his own when both are fighting for a place in a lifeboat. There is not money enough in the universe for him to give his life for the others. There are indeed many treasures which money cannot buy in this dear, just old world.

Origin of "Canard."

Canard, the French for duck, has come to be used in characterization of incredible items in the newspapers, and is a word of curious origin. Many years ago a story went the rounds of European journals recounting an alleged experiment in the voracity of ducks. It was said that ten had been taken and one killed and fed to the remaining nine. Of the nine one had been killed, cut into pieces, and ravenously devoured by the eight. Another having been chopped up was gluttonously gobbled by the seven. And so there finally remained only one duck which performance must have eaten the other nine! This yarn gave rise to the word "canard" when an improbable or ridiculous story was printed.

Concrete Roads Must be Reinforced

[National Crop Improvement Service.]
The building of roads as has been done in the past, is not sufficient. There are many problems which must be solved and a standard established to take care of roads and give them every protection against wear and weather. A few of the problems which are important are:

How much shall be spent to build a particular piece of highway?
What expense is warranted to maintain that piece of highway?

What type of surface should be laid for the different sections, according to population?

What maximum traffic must be prepared for and how shall we estimate the demands of the future?

How shall we divide the responsibility of the government, the state and the county for construction, control and maintenance?

What proportion of the cost shall be borne by the vehicle?

How can the cost of vehicle operation be cut down?
How shall we make highway transport cut the cost of living?

These are all basic problems that call for the correlation of the best thinking of our best minds.

The most efficient highway construction, according to our best knowledge, is re-reinforced concrete built upon a solid roadbed.

It is true that some concrete has been in constant use for years without re-reinforcement, but it is also true that when properly re-reinforced it will maintain itself without further expense, indefinitely.

We should not make the mistake that New York has made. They have constructed and worn out two sets of macadam roads, but are now beginning a third system using re-reinforced concrete. This road laid over the old surface ought to make the best roads the world has ever seen.

CAMILLA KENYON

The talented author of "Spanish Doubloons" says of herself:

"I was born in San Francisco with a family background of the early days. Ill health kept me from school much of the time and threw me on my books as my only resource. Apparently I lacked all feminist proclivities, for I scorned girls' books and instead, reveled in tales of adventure.

"For sea stories, particularly with a buccaneering flavor, I had and have an abiding love. Perhaps this is because I was brought up on a tale—whether truth or legend I am not clear—of an ancestor, a soldier of fortune, who when business was slack, eked out a living as a freebooter, though of course after the fashion of a perfect gentleman. I sometimes think that the soul of the old adventurer may have ensconced itself by mistake in my earthly frame."

This paper will carry "Spanish Doubloons" as a serial. It is a charming tale of adventure and romance in which the principal characters are women, and contains rare humor.

Her Probable Intention.

Wright had been sent to the bank with his weekly amount, and when he returned he did not have his book. His mother asked him where it was. After quite a little hesitation he confessed to her in a whisper, "Well, mother, the girl took it and kept it. I think she wanted to weigh it."

ILLINOIS State News

A 12½ per cent raise in state taxes for the year 1922 was ordered by Governor Small, State Treasurer Russell and Secretary of State Emerson. The three state officials met in Chicago and fixed the state tax rate at 45 cents per $100 of assessed property valuation. The rate last year was 40 cents. The raise will bring an increase of approximately $2,000,000 in state revenues collected by direct taxation. The added rate is necessary because of increased appropriations for educational purposes voted by the recent legislature. Other items of state expenditure, it is said, show a slight decrease. Governor Small in his veto messages having slashed $7,000,000 from legislative appropriations, including $700,000 from Attorney General Brundage's appropriation.

When the state constitutional convention reconvenes on January 3, indications are that they will stay in session until the new constitution is placed in definite shape for presentation to the people for referendum. According to several members of the convention who have visited at the capital during the past week, the convention will stay in session for two or three months, and it is hoped that during that time questions at issue may be amicably settled. Whether the convention will plunge immediately into the work at hand or mark time until the six existing vacancies are filled, has not been made known. The election will be held on January 23.

Præcipe in a $100,000 libel suit against the Illinois Staats-Zeitung, a German language daily newspaper published at Chicago, was filed by Blackhawk Post No. 107, of the American Legion. The suit alleges the paper printed an editorial December 13 saying the American Legion was "an instrument bought with British gold to suppress truth, to gag freedom of conscience to beat down free expression of opinion and to betray American organized labor." The editorial also is said to have asserted the majority of American volunteers "were tramps, vagabonds and bums who placed the American uniform only a shade higher than the garb of the prison house."

Reduction of the corn acreage in Illinois has been voted by the executive committee of the Illinois Agricultural association, headquarters of the association announced at Chicago. A special committee representing the state farm bureau federations of Iowa, Indiana, Missouri and Kansas, as well as of Illinois, took similar action, it was also stated. The resolution advises that the acreage of corn, which is Illinois' greatest crop, be "reasonably reduced" and asks a proportional increase in the acreage of alfalfa, clover, soy beans and other legume crops to improve the soil.

The Illinois Blue Book for 1921-1922, which has been in course of preparation since the adjournment of the general assembly last June, is now ready for distribution, Secretary of State Louis L. Emmerson announced. It is the largest and most comprehensive Blue Book ever issued, containing about three hundred pages more than the last one and comprising statistics and data on a wide variety of subjects relative to the state and the state government never included in previous issues.

The state Supreme court upheld the building ordinance of Zion City, and, therefore, the Grace Missionary church, rival of the followers of Wilbur Glenn Voliva, loses its right to proceed with the erection of a new church. Work on the edifice was stopped last May by order of the mayor of Zion City. The circuit court of Lake county denied a petition for injunction restraining the officials of Zion from interfering with work on the church, and the case went to the Supreme court on appeal.

Gov. Len Small announced the appointment of O. T. Olsen of Chicago as superintendent of plant industry under the Department of Agriculture. The position is provided for in the administrative code, but was not filled under the former administration.

Five of the six Illinois guardsmen named by Governor Small for appointment to West Point were notified by the War department to appear at Jefferson barracks, Mo., on March 7 for mental examination. The five notified that their applications were acceptable were: Private Leroy Pitzer, Headquarters company, Second battalion, Fourth infantry, Peoria; Corporal William H. Awarding within the next few days of contracts for 50 miles of cement roads, as a result of recent bidding will bring the total mileage of hard roads placed under contract to over 717 miles since last February, according to an announcement from the governor's office. A new low-price record of $27,181 a mile was established, the announcement said. Additional contracts to be let early in 1922 will place over 1,000 miles of highway under contract for the coming year, highway officials said. The total cost of the 50 miles upon which bids were received will be $1,362,841, according to the figures compiled by the governor's office.

Authorization to employ guards to hold the Ottawa Brewing company plant, at Ottawa, was received from Washington by Prohibition Director Charles A. Gregory, who seized the plant on orders from the capital. Three agents were left in charge temporarily and a new detail of permanent guards will be dispatched to Ottawa. Although the plant has been temporarily closed down, the company may be permitted to operate long enough to use raw materials which might deteriorate. Officers of the company may ask a hearing at Washington, at which they would be allowed to present witnesses in support of a petition for temporary permit to operate.

Smallpox has been on the increase steadily for the past five years, and in 1920 reached its peak, the State department of health reports. In 1920, the number of cases reported were practically twice that for the preceding year, and equal to more than half the total number of cases for the preceding four years. The death rate taken for the past four fiscal years, which brings the records more up to date show that during the fiscal period of 1920-21, 10,928 cases of smallpox were reported resulting in 29 deaths, a mortality rate of 0.4 per 100,000 population.

The Logan county board of supervisors has appropriated $800 to purchase markers to be placed along the Lincoln trail through the county. Twenty-seven coal mines in the vicinity of Belleville are working on an average of one and one-half days a week. Several others have been forced to shut down entirely, and others report only an occasional day of work. Lack of market for coal, due to the activity of European mines, is the chief cause assigned for the general depression.

A home for aged women is assured for Danville through A. L. Webster, who recently offered $100,000 toward such a project if the citizens would add $30,000 for equipment and maintenance. This sum has now been subscribed. It is proposed to call the institution the "Webster Memorial."

The Andrew coal mine near Centerville, employing 150 men, was closed indefinitely. The mine is owned and operated by the Springfield District Coal Mining company. Lack of demand for coal was given by the president of the company as the reason for the closing of the mine.

One hundred and twenty-five students will arrive at the United States veterans' bureau convalescent training center at Nauvoo after the Christmas holidays, according to school officials. There are now 116 men at Nauvoo. Most students have thus far been housed in a large brick structure, originally built for Catholic sisters as a boys' school. With the new influx, a recently built frame dormitory will be brought into use. The school takes care of veterans discharged from government hospitals until they are able to carry on work in regular technical institutes or colleges.

Seeking to stop professional begging on the streets of Springfield, the commissioner of public safety opened a "municipal mess" at the city prison, where hot soup, coffee and bread will be supplied the unemployed throughout the winter. The commissioner asked that all appeals of beggars be refused and that the beggars be directed to the city prison.

HAVE NEW RINGWORM CURE

Röntgen Rays Are Being Used Successfully in Treatment of Most Annoying Affliction.

Ringworm is now successfully treated by removing the hair with Röntgen rays and then applying a lotion which will penetrate the hair follicles and kill the parasites that are the cause of the trouble.

Drs. Howard Fox and T. B. H. Anderson, both of the United States public health service, described in the Journal of the American Medical Association the latest technique and cite a few of the strange results that have followed when the new hair grew in again.

They have observed that sometimes a golden-haired child is transformed into a brunette, a straight-haired into a curly-headed and the kinky wool of negroes becomes straight. But they express much doubt as to the permanency of these changes.

Age of the Earth.

That fascinating and mysterious substance, radium, has stepped into the arena of science in a new part, the part of time-measurer. Lord Kelvin—it seems only yesterday—was content to take the heat of the sun in order to determine the age of the earth. Then came the saltiness of the sea as another standard. Both are scrapped. All we have to do now is to find out how slowly uranium gives off radium and how slowly radium breaks itself up into helium or lead and you can then take your choice of any period for the age of a habitable earth as from 10,000 to 20,000 millions of years.

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

TEENS AND TWENTIES

BY EXPERIENCE the child soon finds that food satisfies hunger, that water quenches thirst, that a hard blow gives him pain.

As he grows older he learns that his own actions produce certain results which to him are pleasant or unpleasant.

As a child he avoids doing things that cause him bodily pain.

If he burns his hand or cuts his finger, he dreads fire and sharp-edged tools. He knows that if he takes undue liberties with them he is sure to suffer physically and mentally.

Deductive reasoning in children at the age of three or four years is as keen as the edge of a razor, but through some trick of time when they merge into their teens, their childish caution flits away and leaves them imprudent and venturesome.

They flash a red light to warn the old folks to beware of the wisdom and superior cunning of youth.

Teens and twenties are the formative, red-light ages in which both sexes, consciously or unconsciously, shape their destinies.

If in these dangerous ages indulgent parents permit their offspring to have unrestricted freedom, allow them to have their own way at the turning point of the right or the wrong road, the chances are that they will waste their time and substance and drift through life without forming even a nodding acquaintance with success.

To you who are in these perilous periods, running along madly in pursuit of elusive nymphs of pleasure, "stop, look and listen!"

Stop to consider what you are doing. Look about you at those who are climbing the hills. See how cautiously they step. Listen to the words of wisdom, and especially to the advice of your elders.

They have trod the worldly way and know how treacherous it is; how pitfalls are hidden by alluring glimmers, intended to deceive youth; how pride, wantonness and vicissitude take at last to sorrow, eleventh-hour abnegation and finally to broken health and poverty.

You have the power within you to rise to success and distinction.

It is for you, for you alone, to make use of this power, to overcome, to press forward and to make your mark.

Keep on the right path. Hold fast to faith, and at some turn in the road the vista will brighten and you will find yourself at the hilltop, thrilled with unspeakable delight.

THE HAND OF AN ARTIST

FOR a person of either sex to win success in any of the various fields of music, literature, etc.—the hand should be supple, and the fingers should be long. Short fingers denote want of attention to details, and this is, of course, in the majority of cases, fatal to the hopes of success in art. "Genius is an infinite capacity for taking pains" is true in art.

Other favorable signs are the following:

A small upper phalanx of the thumb. If, in addition, the thumb is very flat, the fortunate possessor has an exceptionally favorable thumb for an artist.

If the middle phalanx of the second finger, the Finger of Saturn, is well formed and well developed, and long, it is a sign of great love of the beautiful in nature.

The top phalanx of the third finger, the Finger of Apollo, should be strong, to indicate color perception.

WHY—

DO OUR FACES KEEP WARM IN COLD WEATHER?

OUR faces do get cold, as may be proven by the application of what is known as a "surface thermometer," but we do not feel the cold because the nerves by which we are conscious of a change in temperature are accustomed to this state of things and take no notice of it. If we were accustomed to go out barefoot, but with our faces covered, the present condition would be reversed and we would not "feel" the cold in our feet, but our face would be very uncomfortable the moment we removed the covering.

The same principle is apparent in a number of other things—in the temperature of water which is too cold to bathe in but hardly cool enough to drink; in country persons who find difficulty in sleeping in the city on account of the noise and city people who can't sleep in the country because "it is too quiet"; in those who are accustomed to work in the glare of a blinding light and those who labor in comparative darkness. In other words, it's merely a matter of habit.

LYRICS OF LIFE

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

THE LAST CHAPTER

THE hunter's joy is in the tale,
More great than in the kill;
The sailor rides the wintry gale
Not for the wintry thrill
But that at night-time he may sit
Before the fire recounting it.

For this men climb the steepest mount
And walk the widest plain,
And bring to firesides an account
Of all the toil and pain—
The toll and pain made pleasure when
They tell the tale to other men.

For Memory is a healing nurse
Who makes our minds forget
The rocks and rivers that we curse—
No, we remember yet,
And yet remember rather glad
For every hurt we ever had.

Life's an Adventure, like the trail,
The cruise across the seas;
It has its hill, it has its gale,
It has its memories;
And we shall sit in quiet age
Made glad by every blotted page.

Yes, Time shall soften every fall
And leave the story dear,
Life shall be lovely, after all,
The hurts shall disappear;
Without occasional defeat
Life's story had not been complete.

SCHOOL DAYS

Mother's Cook Book

A man is never astonished or shamed that he does not know what another does, but he is always surprised at the gross ignorance of the other one not knowing what he does.

TASTY GOOD THINGS

TONGUE is considered a great delicacy. It should always be cooked slowly on the back of the range or over the simmering burner. When the tongue is tender take it from the fire and let it cool in the kettle. When cool take from the kettle, remove the skin. Tongue should not be salted while cooking but different flavors may be added, with herbs, carrot, onion, olives and turnip.

Banana Toast.

Take one pint of boiling water, one tablespoonful of cornstarch mixed in a little cold water, one tablespoonful of butter, four tablespoonfuls of sugar and a salt spoon of salt. Boil until clear, stirring constantly; add five bananas rubbed through a sieve, stir and boil a minute longer, then pour over thin buttered toast. This makes a fine Sunday night supper dish.

Barley Fudge.

Brown one cupful of barley in the oven, being careful not to burn it; put it through the meat grinder. Boil two cupfuls of sugar, one-half cupful of corn sirup, one-half cupful of milk to the soft ball stage. Add the barley, one teaspoonful of vanilla and cool. Stir until thick, then pour into a buttered pan and mark off into squares.

FOR LACK OF A BOY SCOUT

The papers recently gave considerable publicity to the fact that a certain physician lost himself in the woods while on a hunting expedition and was found two weeks later, nearly starved with a raw partridge in his hand, because he had no matches to start a fire. It is interesting to notice how frequently in commenting upon this incident the newspapers have pointed out that "the doctor should have had a boy scout along, to show him how to make a fire by friction and find his direction by sun and stars."

"By reason of the scout movement, the next generation will be better prepared for such emergencies," observes the Salt Lake City News. "To say the man suffered for lack of a match is to misstate his case. He suffered almost to death for lack of fire, and he lacked fire because we have come to depend so much on matches. What he needed, in the absence of matches, was a knowledge of some earlier way of making fire." Some knowledge of the arts of primitive man are desirable for all who would seek the primitive wilds. This is one of the great ideas of the boy scout organization. The finished scout, left in the woods, could make a fire by rubbing sticks, could make a wigwam or a hut, and could estimate the general direction by his watch with the aid of the sun. The boy scout organizers did not discover these things, but they discovered that they could still be used in an age of great artificial progress."

BOY SCOUT STATUE FOR FOCH

Boy Scouts Have Been Paying Homage to Marshal Foch and Presenting Him With Various Gifts, Among Which Are a Tait Makenzie Boy Scout Statue in Bronze, Presented By Lorillard Spencer, Scout Commissioner of Manhattan, in Behalf of the Scouts, and a Genuine Indian Pipe of Peace and a War Club, Given in Behalf of the Scouts By Remington Schuyler of New Rochelle.

OMAHA SCOUTS PREVENT WRECK

Two boy scouts, James Caldwell and Clarence Swingholm of Omaha, recently prevented a serious train wreck by prompt action and presence of mind. Coming home from a hike they discovered that a large tree had fallen directly across the track of the Omaha-Chicago passenger train which was already whistling around the bend only a few hundred yards away. Tearing off the red sweater of one of the boys they ran along the track, waving the danger signal frantically. The train was halted and doubtless many lives were saved. "Nothing to it," said Scout Swingholm when people tried to overwhelm the lads with praise. "We just did a good turn and that's what boy scouts are for." The tree was one which some bee hunters had evidently felled and ran away from in dismay when they saw it had fallen in so precarious a place. The contrast between the conduct of the boys and that of the men speaks for itself. Once again, "We can't help being proud of 'em."

GIVES BLOOD TO SAVE CHILD

Charles Hopper, a sixteen-year-old boy scout of Troop 4, Terre Haute, in all probability saved the life of a twenty-two-months-old baby girl by giving a pint of his own blood for transfusion, as a voluntary sacrifice. The child's mother had already given two transfusions, but was too weak to give more, and the child's life was despaired of when young Hopper came to the front.

TOP NOTCHERS ONLY

Troop 5 of Tulsa, Okla., has nothing but merit badge scouts in its ranks. Among these are nine Eagles, three Life and Star scouts and three Veterans. Their combined Merit badges total 350. The troop has 18 active members, all of whom are in high school with the exception of two members who are freshmen in the University of Tulsa. John Shleppey, their assistant scoutmaster, was one of the first Eagles in Tulsa, and has 42 Merit badges to his credit.

PROVERBS HELD IN COMMON

Remarkable Similarity of Ideas Noted Among Nations, Both of the Old and New World.

The similarity of ideas all over the world is found in the similarity of expressions to convey the ideas. The old English proverb "A fool and his money are soon parted," finds its counterpart in the phrase, "There is no medicine for a fool." But the Japanese also claim that by good management they can do something even with fools, when they say, "Fools and scissors move according to the mode of using them." Some of us carry our Latin with us all our lives, just because we had a good teacher. To these, the old Latin saying, "The eagle does not catch flies," (Aquila non capit muscas) will recall old memories of the pride and sarcasm of the Romans. So also will they be pleased to read the Japanese aphorism, "The falcon does not peck at ears of corn," which is true, as falcons, especially those of the peregrine type, are much more likely to seize and carry small animals like lambs, rabbits, chickens. —Philadelphia Ledger.

MOTHER, QUICK! GIVE

CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP

FOR CHILD'S BOWELS

Even a sick child loves the "fruity" taste of "California Fig Syrup." If the little tongue is coated, or if your child is listless, cross, feverish, full of cold, or has colic, a teaspoonful will never fail to open the bowels. In a few hours you can see for yourself how thoroughly it works all the constipation poison, sour bile and waste from the tender, little bowels and gives you a well, playful child again.

Millions of mothers keep "California Fig Syrup" handy. They know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say, "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.—Advertisement.

Taking Precautions.

A tourist in Scotland came to a wide river. It was a stormy day and the wind was constantly increasing, but he asked a boatman to take him across. The latter agreed to do so, if the tourist would wait until he'd take his cow over.

Later, as they were nearing the opposite bank, the tourist asked: "Will you tell me why you took your cow over and made me wait?"

"Well, now," explained the old fellow, "ye see the cow wur valuable, and I feared th' wind wur increase so the boat might upset on the second trip."

Mysterious Stove.

At a recent electrical exposition a "mystic stove" attracted no little attention. This idea is by no means new; in fact, in one of its most spectacular forms it consists of a kettle of water boiling on a cake of ice. The solution of such mysteries is powerful magnetic induction, which causes the generation of powerful electric current in the pot, pan or kettle. The layman is, of course, greatly mystified, since water can be boiled, eggs fried, and so on, with no visible source of heat. The hand can be passed over the tapestry-covered table without feeling any trace of heat.—Scientific American.

Two Tunes.

Ambrose, the piano tuner, had tuned the piano, and found it in good condition.

A few days later he received a letter from the owner of the piano, stating it had not been properly tuned.

The tuner made another trip, and tested every note, only to find no fault with the instrument.

He told the lady so.

"Well," she said, "it does seem all right, doesn't it, when you play on it; but as soon as I begin to sing it gets all out of tune!"

OCEANS HARD TO IMAGINE

People of the Middle Ages Found It Difficult to Conceive Extent of Waters.

Eratosthenes was right; the earth was a globe. But what philosopher ever imagined that it was so large! Homer was right when he sang of the "mighty flood," but he was thinking of the insignificant Mediterranean. What poet had imagination enough to picture the vastness of the Pacific! Many had surmised the truth, but none had realized its extent. When the caravels of Columbus had sailed and returned the wise ones of the Renaissance were astonished by the story brought home. It seemed impossible that there could be so much water. And still the girth of the seas was uncomprehended. It was only when Magellan's Santa Victoria had circumnavigated the globe and dropped anchor in the Bay of San Lúcar that a realization of the world of water began to dawn. The Atlantic was astonishing enough in all conscience; but the Pacific was overwhelming and dumfounding.—John C. Van Dyke.

Human Nature Much Alike.

History and geography are not always the truest guide to a people's character. A great deal of the human nature of men is displayed in the local sayings and aphorisms; this will also tell us how human all races are. The remark of Valentine in the "Two Gentlemen of Verona," "that homekeeping youth have ever homely wits," finds its companion in the Japanese phrase "Kawai Ko Ni Wa Tabi Wo-Sase (a pet child should be made to travel). A sentiment agreed to by all persons, except the fond mother and the pet. The Japanese express their contempt for the petted child even more strongly when they say: "A grandmother's pet is three sen cheaper than other boys." —Philadelphia Ledger.

John the Baptist.

At one of the Protestant churches in Hendricks county the subject of baptism was the theme for the classes in the Sabbath school. John the Baptist was mentioned several times. A seventeen-year-old girl, besides giving attention to the lesson, kept turning her head to see the young men who entered the door. Just as she turned her head for the seventh time the teacher quickly asked her: "Mary, who came in at the door?"

"John the Baptist," said the girl, somewhat confused.

From that day on Mary gave close attention to the lesson.

A Foul Thurst.

Averill Harriman, the steamship magnate, was talking about modern dances—the shimmy and suchlike.

"These dances," he said, "may be suggestive, but I am sure the American girl dances them innocently. To the pure, you know—"

"Yes, I am sure the cynical foreigner was quite wrong in his comment on our dancing. A brother foreigner said to him:

"These American dances are infernally difficult. I wonder if I'll ever be able to dance them the right way."

"Don't bother about that," his cynical companion answered. "American girls only care to dance them the wrong way."

No matter how proud a girl may be of her family name, she's seldom averse to changing it.

Man is a miniature universe; all things exist in him tinged with the manners of his soul.
